PROPRIETORS.....THE HONGKONG HOTEL COMPANY, LIMITED.

THE HONGKONG HOTEL—the most commodious and best appointed Hotel in the Far East, affords unequalled accommodation to travellers and others. It is situated in the centre of the town, opposite the General Post Office and the Hongkong Club, adjacent to Pedder's Wharf (the principal landing stage of the Colony) and in close proximity to the Banks and Shipping Offices.

The HOTEL STEAM LAUNCH conveys passengers and baggage to and from all Mail Steamers.

THE TABLE D'HOTE, at separate tables, is supplied with every delicacy, the cuisine being under experienced supervision.

THE BED-ROOMS, with adjoining Bath-rooms, are lofty and well ventilated, open on to spacious Verandahs, are lighted by gas and fitted throughout with electric communicators.

The Reading, Writing and Smoking Rooms, Ladies' Drawing Rooms, the new Bar and public BILLIARD ROOMS, (Six English and American Tables) are fitted with every convenience.

A handsomely appointed GRILL ROOM, where chops, steaks, &c., are served at any hour adjoins the HOTEL, and is under the same Management.

The WINES AND SPIRITS are selected by an Expert and the BEST BRANDS only are supplied.

HYDRAULIC ASCENDING-ROOMS of the latest and most approved type convey passengers and baggage from the Entrance Hall to each of the five floors above.

NIGHT PORTERS and WATCHMEN are continually on duty.

Auctions

PUBLIC AUCTION.

MR. F. RAPP has received instructions to Sell by PUBIC AUCTION (without reserve, to the highest bidder), TO-MORROW, the 19th day of March, 1892, at Noon, at the OFFICES of the AUSTIN ARMS HOTEL AND BUILDING COMPANY, LIMITED, 38 and 40, Queen's Road Central not previously disposed of by Private Contract),

VALUABLE LEASHOLD PROPERTY,

held Nos. 1 to 11, MOUNTAIN VIEW, the PEAK, VICTORIA, in the Colony of HONGKONG, and situated on Rural Building Lot No. 60 and the Remaining Portion of Rural Building Lot No. 18, as the premises are held for the residues of two several terms of 75 years and 75 years respectively from the 10th day of December, 1877, and the 28th day of February, 1882, respectively granted therein, subject to the payment of the proportion of Crown Rents payable in respect thereof and the performance of the Crown Covenants to be performed in respect thereof, and subject also to the existing lettings and tenancies thereof.

These Houses are situate on one of the finest sites in the Hill District known as Mountain View, and face the Harbour on the North, the Ladrone Islands on the South, and command views of the finest scenery the Island and its surroundings afford.

The Houses are exceptionally cool in Summer, and are externally built of Amoy brick. With a little outlay of money they could be rendered as attractive externally as they are well appointed and comfortable internally. Nos. 1 and 11 each contain six good sized dwelling rooms, and the remaining houses five. They are provided with bath rooms and all necessary out offices. Gas is laid on.

The Sale offers to Hongkong residents, desirous of living in their own homes, an opportunity which is not likely to occur again.

The Vendors have arranged for part of the Purchase Money to remain on Mortgage, for a term of years in the case of approved Purchasers by them, but the Debentures of the Austin Arms Hotel and Building Company, Limited, will not be accepted in lieu of cash.

The Houses will be sold in one Lot or separate Lots, comprising one house each, at the option of the Vendors.

For further particulars, Sale Plan, and Conditions of Sale, apply to.

A RUMOUR has been current for the past day or two that Mr. Hastings, R.N., Acting Harbour Master, would probably act as locum tenens for Mr. A. G. Wise at the Magistracy. On inquiry we find that it is, for the present at all events, only a rumour.

SJARBORG, the foreign nobleman who a few weeks ago narrowly escaped a spell of the cangue in Shanghai as an incorrigible rogue and vagabond, has at last left the Model Settlement for good. He was shipped in the W. H. Conner, bound for Manila, on the 11th inst.

BESIDES "Ada Maven's Folly" Company, expected from Rangoon to open in Singapore on the 23rd, Miss Jewel Deane, well known in the east from her association with the "My Sweetheart" troupe, has brought out a company which by last advices was in Moulmein on the way Eastward.

KOTCHI YONEZO, the Japanese stowaway who jumped overboard from the steamer Zambesi and was rescued by a watchman of the steamship Holstein, has been released from Victoria Gaol, where he was confined as a vagrant, at the instance of Mr. Miyakawa Kyujiro, consul for Japan at this port. Kotchi is now employed as a servant in a local Japanese restaurant.

AT the meeting of the Sanitary Board this afternoon it was reported that in consequence of an alarming letter in the Daily Press recently on the Hongkong bakeries, all the bakeries in town had been visited and inspected officially, with the result that the evils described were not found to exist. As, however, there are at present no bake-house regulations, it was decided to draft rules for consideration at an early date.

The visitor who remarks that your boy is the handsomest little fellow he ever saw, and that he bears a striking resemblance to you.

THE presentation to Sequah, "the Medicine Man," of a gold medal and complimentary scroll by a number of citizens of Macao, was not made until yesterday afternoon—the ceremony having to be postponed from Wednesday owing to the medal not being completed. The presentation took place about 6 o'clock in the presence of a big crowd of admiring onlookers. To-morrow night Sequah will appear in a new rôle, having arranged to give an entertainment in the Dom Pedro Theatre for the benefit of the Macao Civil Hospital. The programme is a varied one and includes studies in the Black Art, conjuring, Indian club swinging, rope-tying and spiritualistic séance, à la Baldwin, and other items, Sequah having the assistance of Macao amateurs. The Police Band will perform during the evening.

UNITED States judges continue to insist that steamers must come to a standstill when whistles are heard and there is danger of a misunderstanding. A short time ago the freight and passenger steamer Yonkr, when nearing New York in the Hudson river, ran into a fog so thick that vessels could not be seen more than 150 feet distant, and thereupon hauled in toward shore to keep in sight of the piers. The ferry boat Midland was crossing the river. Each vessel heard the whistles of the other near at hand and both stopped their engines, but the Yonkr did not reverse at all and the Midland not until the other vessel was seen within 150 feet and too late to avoid collision. Judge Brown of New York held that with fog signals sounding very near at hand, and nearly ahead, it was the duty of each vessel to come to a standstill in the water, by reversing as soon as possible, until their respective positions were discovered. As each was in this respect chargeable with the same fault, the damages were divided.

IF, philosophises the Hyogo News, it be a sin to be ambitious then are some of the rising young hopefuls of Japan the most offending souls alive. Thus, on the 7th inst., at the Fujimiken, Tokyo, ten scholars and some members of one or two extinct associations determined to form a society to be called Wagu Kokkai (our Diet). There is nothing mean about them. They will adopt a neutral position and correct all mistakes of the Government and popular parties, and in addition will discuss constitutional and social problems and become the guides of public opinion. To err is human, and Governments err most humanly sometimes, but when to this is added the burden of the errors of popular parties, and the guidance of public opinion, at present chaotic, these young Titans have undertaken a task older men would quail at. But fools rush in—. At the impertinence of an amateur Parliament constituting themselves public monitors, we will not sneer. Wisdom comes with experience, and the experience of failure has its good as well as its humiliating lessons.

THE N. C. Daily News publishes the following cablegram re Ministerial changes in Japan, dated Kobe, March 12th:—Viscount Shinagawa Yajiro, Minister for Home Affairs, has resigned, and has taken Count Ito's place as President of the Privy Council. Count Soyejima, a Saga man (Hizen), Vice-President of the Privy Council, who is in sympathy with the people's rights, succeeds Viscount Shinagawa as Minister for Home Affairs.

WE note that a house is in course of construction at Breezy Point, close to the German Joss-house. There'll be a very stiff "breeze" there later on if a young typhoon comes along some Sawbath day and shifts the roof of the new domicile into the kirk, thereby grievously injuring a number of devout worshipers who, with bended knee and contrite heart, are wont to praise the god of Shem, Ham and Japhet, Hongkong brokers and all sorts of good people.

A FOOCHOW correspondent writes to the Ostasiatische Lloyd:—On the 3rd inst. a tiger was killed by the country people, in the vicinity of Pagoda Anchorage, where his tigership had destroyed dozens of pigs, goats and even cattle, during the last two months. It was a splendid, full-grown male, the carcass measuring over seven feet. The paws measured seven inches in diameter. The carcass was sold in Foochow, and found willing purchasers amongst the natives.

As will be seen from an advertisement which appears elsewhere in this evening's Telegraph, quite an elaborate programme has been prepared for to-night's entertainment at Woodyear's circus and doubtless the enterprise of the management will be duly rewarded. To-morrow night, however, gives promise of still greater fun when, in addition to the "mill" which has been announced, some amateurs promise to enter the fistic arena to display their grit in the good old game.

TWO mails from Japan to England were despatched on December 17th, one by the Empress of India and one by the Oceanic. The former reached Vancouver before the latter arrived in Frisco, and the silk from the Empress was delivered in New York on the 5th January; but the mails by the Canadian route took fourteen days to cross the Atlantic, arriving in London on the 19th January, while the Oceanic's mail was delivered in London on the 11th. This emphasises very markedly the necessity for a fast Atlantic service to connect with the Canadian mails.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL presidents who have the handling of trust-funds are, says the Sydney Bulletin, hereby notified that, under the existing and amended extradition laws, a safe retreat to persons accused of indictable offences is now to be found in no part of the civilised world. Even Honolulu isn't safe. They have no extradition treaty there, but they have what is as good—a law by which any suspected or otherwise objectionable person can be hunted out of the kingdom. This law is put into operation just according to whether the Government which wants a criminal or the criminal himself is prepared to spend most money in greasing the local authorities.

MR. PLIMSOLL, says the N. Y. Maritime Register, has been giving before the Royal Labor Commission some sensational testimony on the wrongs of British sailors. If half what Mr. Plimsoll alleges is true some British shipowners should pass their remaining days in prison, as a meet place for repentance and atonement for misery inflicted upon men through their vile greed. Mr. Plimsoll makes the charge that loss of life on British ships is quadruple that proportionally of any other nation. Overloading and over-insurance Mr. Plimsoll alleges are the causes for this. Bad food and poor accommodation for sailors are also mentioned in the bill of indictment against the British shipowner. A sweeping denial will not do in Mr. Plimsoll's case. He indulges in exaggeration and paints with the blackest colors, but he has a foundation of truth sufficient to show that some evils that should not be, exist. Our own shipowners are no saints, but the charge of supplying bad food to their sailors can seldom be brought against them.

REFERRING to the death of Mr. Wainewright, the N. C. Daily News of the 14th inst. says:—The almost sudden and entirely unexpected death of Mr. Robert Ernest Wainewright, the actual if not the nominal leader of the Shanghai bar, which took place at seven o'clock last evening, is a public calamity. But it is too soon after his lamented death to think of the loss the community has sustained in the death of the able lawyer; to half the community or more there is only room this morning for sorrow at the loss of one of the best and kindest friends in Shanghai. A Londoner, and a lawyer almost by birth, the late Mr. Wainewright was educated at the North London School, where he had Mr. Joseph Chamberlain for a schoolmate, and at University College, London, subsequently joining the firm of solicitors of which his father was a member. He came out to Shanghai some twenty years ago to join Mr. William Harwood, and his great geniality, and his perfect knowledge of the world, rapidly put him in the front rank. But great as his endowments were as a lawyer, it was his unfailing wit, and his equally unfailing kindness of heart, that will keep his memory always green in the hearts of all who knew him in Shanghai. There was a magetism in him which attracted to it every one who was in trouble, whether that trouble was deserved or undeserved, and he never spared himself if he could assist, and he always could in some way, those who went to him. Hospitable he was, too, and generous to a fault, and the quickness of his perception and of his wit was marvellous. He saw a point instantly, and he had the faculty of making others see it almost as quickly, which made his assistance at any gathering, public or private, invaluable. He was only taken seriously ill, becoming rapidly unconscious, early on Saturday morning, and he never recovered full consciousness, passing away quite quietly yesterday evening. Faults of course he had, for he was human, but if the names of those who love and do good to their fellow men lead all the rest, Mr. Wainewright's will stand very high. To write of him adequately so soon after his unexpected death is impossible, but those of our readers who know him will fill up this outline for themselves; and for those who did not know him we cannot do more than thus hint at the loveableness of the personality that passed away last evening.

SUPREME COURT.

IN CRIMINAL SESSIONS.

(Before Chief Justice Sir J. Russell.)

March 18th.

THEFT BY AN OFFICE BOY.

Ip Yuk Lau, formerly office boy to Mr. R. Gubbay, was charged with larceny of a cheque for $463. The following jury was empanelled:—Messrs. Andrew Johnston, J. M. G. Pereira, E. S. Joseph, H. Reeves, F. Smyth, C. J. L. Stewart, J. M. P. Tavares.

The Attorney General, Mr. W. M. Goodman, stated that the offence was said to have been committed about a year ago. Prisoner was given a cheque to pay over to Mr. Gubbay's compradore (who, it was mentioned, was also Adamson Bell & Co.'s compradore) but instead of paying it over he cashed it himself and disappeared. Lately he returned to Hongkong and was arrested. The cheque when presented to the bank had a Chinese endorsement, but there was not a clear case of forgery against the prisoner.

His Lordship commented on the loose system by which a theft of this kind was so easy. The Bank's Chinese staff ought to be able to ensure that money on cheques was paid to the right man.

The prisoner stated that by a singular coincidence, just when he got the money, his mother died in Canton. Of course, he must attend to business first and pleasure previously, so he went to bury his mother. He had just returned, intending to tell his employer all about it, when suddenly he found himself arrested. The money had all gone in funeral expenses.

Twelve months hard.

ASSAULT AND ROBBERY.

Wong Hai was charged with having, on the 18th Feb. last at 107 Hollywood Road, entered the house of a Chinese priest. The old man was away (probably at the races) and his wife was in bed, sick. Prisoner and another man entered and asked where the Rev. Padre was, saying they wanted to take him to the races. Then they proceeded to investigate the portable property of the house, having peppered the lady's eyes; the husband and his friends returned, and a free fight ensued, prisoner brandishing a knife.—The police entered, and secured the prisoner before much harm was done.

Prisoner when arrested said that he went to the house to ask for some money which the priest owed him; and that to evade payment the priest and his family concocted this story, throwing the pepper about and so on, to back up their case.

The evidence was conclusive, and prisoner was sentenced to two years' hard labour and two floggings of 25 lashes each.

IN SUMMARY JURISDICTION.

The Chinese money loan association case, heard on appeal and fully reported on 13th January last, was decided to-day in favour of the appellants.

"AN IRISH SAILOR'S CAREER."

CAPTAIN O'KEEFE EXPLAINS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "HONGKONG TELEGRAPH."

SIR,—I notice an article in your paper copied from the Savannah News, headed "An Irish Sailor's Career" making certain references to me. The entire article, with the exception of the shooting of a seaman, is a tissue of falsehoods from first to last. I did not think I had an enemy in the world who would stoop so low, as to fabricate such a malicious and vindictive libel.

In the first place the writer in the Savannah News commences with a wrong name. He next states that, but for the trouble I had, I might still be a resident of Savannah and a poor man. I can assure you, I have been poorer since leaving home, than ever I was before. He shows his malice in not stating plain facts. I was captain of the Anna Sims, and this seaman Daly, (not Sullivan) broached cargo, and when he found out I knew about it, as I told him that I would give him six months' imprisonment on my return to Savannah from the West Indies, he made up his mind to lick me, and get clear of the vessel. He started in to do so, but I would not take a licking worth a cent; the fellow had the balance of the sailors at his back, but my promptness cowed the others down. I gave myself up to the military authorities, as no civil authority was then in existence. When President Johnson's proclamation was issued, delivering civil prisoners over to civil authority, I was tried by the Superior Court of McIntosh County, and the issue of the trial was a verdict of "justifiable homicide."

He then tells another deliberate falsehood in reference to the steamer Islander. I was captain and owner of a fourth share of that vessel, and there was never any trouble up to the time I sold out of her, which I had to do on account of a severe attack of swamp fever. While in the Islander I married; this took place some three years after the unfortunate affair in the Anna Sims, though the account in the Savannah News infers that my leaving home was solely attributable to the trouble I had with the man Daly.

The writer also draws largely on his imagination when he speaks of my wealth; the elegance I live in, and my beautiful equipage. It is a well-known fact, that any coolie, with a dime in his pocket, can have the same luxury, viz: a rickshaw.

In conclusion, I may state that I left Savannah, chief officer of the ship Belvidere bound to Liverpool, and continued in that vessel to Manila, where I left, trusting to do better. My present position proves that my trust had good grounds.

The writer in the Savannah News maliciously remarks that I had obtained the island of Nyuk in the Australian group, by a trade of some kind. Ye gods! what a display of learning. If he had had the sense to turn over the leaves of an atlas, he could have posted himself on things he knows nothing of, and have seen that our position here is about four thousand miles from Australia.

I suppose he refers to my sovereignty of the St. Davids Group; but suffice it to say that the obtaining of this has stood the scrutiny of two Governments—those of Spain and Germany—as subjects of the latter country tried to oust me. But my position was secure, as its former owner, the King, came up to Yap, and gave his evidence before the Governor here, that I had bought the place, and that he did not want anyone else there.

When I was struggling hard some ten years since, and began to be successful, my opponents spread various reports to my detriment; so much so, that an English man-of-war, the Espiegle with Mr. Le Hunt as High Commissioner on board, was sent down to try me, they thinking I was a British subject, on account of my French name. I stood the trial, and was complimented by Captain Bridge and Mr. Le Hunt on my behaviour towards the natives, and was invited to dine with them several times. When I informed them that I was an American citizen, they stated that I should have told them that before, as they could not possibly interfere with subjects of other nationalities even should such a course have seemed to them desirable; but as I had been so fearfully vilified, they would see that publicity would be given to the affair, which was done in the Hongkong papers of 1883.

Doubtless I may make enemies by my last remark. I am the only principal of a large business in this part of the world, whose hands are clear of the blood of these poor natives. This is a challenge to urge those who are acquainted with my career here to bring the least fault forward that may be against me as regards my treatment of, or trading with the natives. My head is too level to kill the goose that lays the golden eggs.

I am, Sir,
Yours faithfully,
DAVID DEAN O'KEEFE.

POLICY IN THE PHILIPPINE ISLANDS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "HONGKONG TELEGRAPH."

SIR,—There is no doubt that General Despujol, the Acting Governor of the Archipelago, is distinguishing himself by inaugurating a new era in the management of colonial affairs. At the beginning of his term, when his predecessor General Weyler (who came down here with empty hands) was leaving the country with a rich cargo of more than a hundred and fifty tons, besides the millions sent to European banks, General Despujol on taking charge brought with him his own house furniture, horses, carriages, and even his own money too, a most remarkable fact in the history of this colony. Soon after, it leaked out that this new Governor had refused a present of a silverplated carriage, offered by a leading Chinese merchant, who had always before propitiated the Governors and other authorities by frequent and rich presents, and who by these means had become virtually one of the real rulers of the country.

Finding great defects in the internal administration, in military bodies as well as in civil, Despujol for the first time dared to send back to Spain a high officer, branded with his strong reprobation issued in the Government Gazette, and reproduced by all the papers. In the same way, although with less publicity, not daring yet to face the priestcraft, he rid himself of several monks who had managed to do as they liked regardless of the laws, under the preceding governors. For some faulty fulfilment of their duties, he transferred to Mindanao his own son and his own nephew, and on account of a very recent brutality he changed nearly the whole staff of the Manila Police or Guardia Veterana, against whose conduct there were for years and years many heavy written and spoken complaints. These reforms, which in better administered countries need not to be specially spoken of, as they constitute the duty of the ruler, deserve surely here every praise, for they were effected in the face of great difficulties on the part of the priests and their followers. Many of the corrupt ones do not disguise their dissatisfaction; some think it dangerous, and resign their positions, like a certain chief of a high military institution. The priests, who are accustomed to be considered as prime ministers, to follow the governors everywhere, to be seated with them at the table, to be their andvisers and Mentors, finding now a governor who travels, eats, and acts without their help, and delivers speeches without mentioning them, give way to their feelings and publish the most fearful stories about the mind and common sense of the "pretended reformer." The funeral honours of late General Ferrero, one of the bitter enemies of the Manila monks, ordered by Despujol, have been interpreted as a wanton injury to their sacred feelings, especially since this is the first time that funeral services have been held in honour of governors who have died in Spain. So, nobody can wonder at the absence of the archbishop on the occasion of the inauguration of the railway from Bagbag to Mabalacat, the archbishop having previously stopped in a pueblo. Similarly, when Despujol visited Sos Banos a village in Laguna de Bay, and spent there four hours receiving several commissions from the whole province, the priests of the neighbouring villages, who used to greet and welcome any high authority that came near by, did not appear till Governor Despujol was gone away, and yet they were only fifteen minutes distant! Some would threaten with the names of Salcedo, Bustamante, and other governors of bygone days, who met very sad ends for being contrary to priests' ideas, but as far as we can judge from the feeling of the Philippines, Governor Despujol ought not to fear; the inhabitants would stand for him, for they look to him as their saviour against the monkish tyranny. There are indeed some sceptical men who shake their heads, and think that Philippine rulers always begin properly for two or three months, and finish afterwards by becoming the slaves of the all-powerful theocracy.

Another illustration of Despujol's policy is the return of numerous unhappy people deported by Weyler, the priests' instrument, to various unhealthy places. General Despujol seizes every opportunity of calling them from banishment, and as if he were anxious to render justice and at the same time not daring to discredit his predecessor's dispositions, he profits by his very birthday, to bring them back in honour of that day, incurring the sneer of his enemies, who accuse him of playing the sovereign and "happiness-dispensator." But every good-minded man must admire the ruler who is not afraid of this ridicule, even if there were a cause, if only he can follow his conscience and do his duty. Among those whom he sent lately to their home, are many Calamba men, unjustly and violently deported by Weyler on account of their struggle with the Dominicans, of which the Telegraph has given a full account. Owing perhaps to the consideration paid by Governor Despujol to his predecessor, as pointed out by one of the papers in Manila, he did not recall them all, nor did he dare to pronounce them quite innocent, as they are thought to be by the whole Archipelago, which greeted the order of banishment with groans, published even in the heavily-oppressed press. The Dominicans, seeing the bad results of their past policy, and fearing that the recall of the banished may throw on them an unfavourable shadow, would ascribe now to themselves the act of clemency and the inspiration of such measure, depriving its author of his legitimate glory, and confessing that they have acted too hastily and without consideration. May General Despujol act more freely in the future and, taking further steps in his new course, give to everybody what belongs to him, without base restrictions, without indulging in complicity with the faults or doings of his predecessors.

SANTIAGO ALVAREZ.

Manila, 12th March, 1892.

TO "IMPUDENT LITTLE MENIALS."

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "HONGKONG TELEGRAPH."

SIR,—To those impudent clerks in our local banks and other public places, who seem to ignore the most common rules of urbanity, I would recommend the following words, uttered by one who is in a higher position than they are.

"Lack of refinement in one's manner, or incivility in one's ordinary personal address, ought to be a matter of regret to the person whose daily life displays such a defect. But it is by no means uncommon for men and women to think, or to pretend they think, that rudeness of manner and neglect of the courtesies of life are evidence of a strong character, and that a coarse and uncivil habit of speech is an admirable proof that the speaker is a 'plain blunt person' who is above shams and pretences. Nevertheless while rudeness may exist along with strength of character and integrity, it is always a blemish to them and never a help."

I do not write to you inopportunely, Sir, for go where you will, chiefly in public institutions, you always meet these kinds of clerks. Ignorant of everything, yet they seem to be little potentates. Sometimes one's blood runs hot in one's veins and the idea of sending the fellow to the "world which is to come," is quite within the bounds of realisation; but pity for the poor fellow smothers one's anger.

Hoping that those to whom I refer will read, and read over again what I have given above, and thanking you in anticipation,

I remain,
Yours truly,
SKROW.

NOTES FROM CHINESE PAPERS.

The Shanghai native tea merchants have started for the various tea-producing districts preparatory to the opening of the market.

The Shanghai magistrate to trying a murder case in which the victim was a thief. It appears that the man was caught attempting to break into a house at Pootung. The neighbours strung him up to a pole, and so maltreated him that he succumbed to his injuries. The culprits were indicted for murder in the first degree, and are now being tried on that charge.

The Nanking Viceroy's deputy Yü has held, with the magistrate, another examination of the alleged Kolao conspirator, Wang King-lung. The prisoner confessed that he had joined the Society, but said he had never received any office, that he was only serving in a menial capacity and that he knew nothing of the Society's affairs. In repeated cross-examinations Wang stuck to what he had said. Deputy Yü ordered him to receive 100 blows with the bamboo and 300 cuts with the whip. The prisoner was again remanded.

The following notice is posted on the door of the Nanking Viceroy's yamin:—As his Excellency has been very busy of late, it is impossible for him to give daily audience to the subordinate officials. From this time forth (excepting important military matters and foreign affairs, which his Excellency will discuss and settle at any time, day or night) all ordinary business that requires a personal interview, will receive attention only on the 3rd, 5th, 8th, 10th, 13th, 15th, 18th, 20th, 23rd, 25th, 28th and 30th days of the month. Should it happen that his Excellency does not hold a general reception on one of these days, he will specially receive such officials as have business to transact. On all other days his Excellency desires to deny himself to the "general public."

THE SAILING SHIP AND THE SHIPMASTER.

Captain Blackmore in an address before the Shipmaster's Society in London, said, "it is admitted on all hands that the sailing vessel is the only available school for seamen." In view of the steady increase of steamers in the carrying trade, this statement appears to be disputable. It is a truism that new conditions bring their own support. Under such circumstances, it would seem that if steamers are to replace sailing vessels entirely, the kind of seamanship required for the latter will be unnecessary and that demanded for steamers will be evolved from its surroundings. The chief weakness in this theory is that seamanship demands the knowledge of how to handle a vessel in all kinds of weather, under extraordinary circumstances, and often when the principal means of propulsion is lost. It all presupposes a practical as well as a theoretical knowledge and accompanying ability. These cannot be learned in the steamer school. And if the mastless steamer comes into vogue the chances for a young man learning to become a seaman will be slim. The officer will then be simply a navigator, the sailor simply a lookout. That a steamer, mastless or otherwise, needs seamen in charge has been demonstrated too often, and the more closely the matter is studied, the more evident will it be that seamanship, of the kind learned in the handling of sailing ships, cannot be eliminated from the merchant service, and that Captain Blackmore's assertion is true.

This school, however, may disappear if it is true that steam is to replace sail upon the seas. Under such conditions the only way to retain it would be for maritime nations to maintain sailing vessels as school ships, and make attendance upon these compulsory upon all those who intended becoming sailors. This plan would be hardly feasible on account of other reasons besides that of expense. But is the school to depend entirely upon this plan? Sailing ships are on the increase again. Sail has taken a new lease of life and strange as it appears to many people, has proved even more profitable than steam. That it must remain forever subordinate to steam need hardly be said, but evidence is patent that it is not being swept away and substantial reasons can be adduced to show that it must ever remain an important factor in the carrying trade. As the sailing ship will remain, the best school for training seamen will remain also, but it will depend upon shipowners whether full advantage is taken of such kind of training. This is not a matter which concerns only the seamen and the shipowners. It is one in which the whole community is interested, for it would be difficult to find any person, or industry, not in some way connected with shipping.

In one sense the great changes in navigation and shipping necessitate a broader education and even greater skill on the part of shipmasters. While their responsibilities in one direction may have decreased, in another way they have increased, and the master is yet legally responsible for duties over which he has little, if any, control. Higher education in respect of the shipmaster is not a fad, is not a bug-a-boo to scare over-economical shipowners. It is a requirement necessary to enable the shipmaster to be the active agent in the support of the merchant marine. The whole history of shipping shows that in all successful commercial marines the shipmaster was largely instrumental in securing and holding prosperity. Despite the many changes that apparently tend to subordinate his position and to weaken its influence, the master still remains strong for bettering and building up a marine. This point should be remembered in this country where efforts are making toward the rehabilitation of our shipping. It may be accepted as a rule, that the ship is no better than its officer, and that the best officers are the product of good education as well as technical seamanship. New York Maritime Register.

"STARBOARD" AND "PORT."

Since the 1st July of last year the old words of command for altering the helm, viz., "starboard" and "port," have been given up on board the ships of the North German Lloyds' and the Hamburg-American line, and the order "right" or "left" substituted.

It is difficult to break with old customs, and seamen especially are conservative; it is therefore not a matter of wonder that many old sailors look with great disfavor upon this latest innovation. On board the steamers of the two great lines mentioned above, however, the change has been made obligatory, and, according to a report forwarded to the directors by one of their oldest captains, who was himself opposed to the idea, has been attended with the happiest results.

As soon as the order "right" is given, the telegraph is moved to the right, the wheel is revolved to the right, the ship turns to the right, the rudder-indicator points right, the rudder itself moves right, and the steering-mark on the compass as well; and so vice versa when the order "left" is given. Nothing can be simpler, and no possibility of mistake can arise.

The objection has been raised that the new words of command are not international and are therefore illegal; this statement, however, will not hold good, as both English and American pilots, in whom everyone has confidence, have made no difficulties in using the new words of command when piloting the ships of the two before-mentioned companies.

Such special words of command as "luff" and "keep away" will naturally be retained when ships are under sail; but otherwise it is pretty certain that before long in the whole German merchant service "right" and "left" will be substituted for "starboard" and "port" as has already been done in the German Navy; and men returning from the latter to the merchant service will no longer have to unlearn what they have been taught on board the men-of-war. —Nautical Magazine.

A TALE OF THE WASTE P.B.

I.

The editor sat in his easy chair,
'Mid piles of MSS. everywhere.
In heaps they lay
On desk and floor,
They blocked the way
From chair to door;
But space there was at the editor's knee
For a yawning, gaping waste p.b.

II.

The editor's face wore a fearful frown
As to read those piles he settled down;
His hair he tore,
Then heaved a sigh,
While on the floor
He turned his eye,
And fixed his gaze imploringly
On that yawning, gaping, waste p.b.

III.

"The Rover's Bride" was the first he read.
And oh, the fearful words he said!
His language strong
Filled all the room,
But right or wrong,
He pronounced this doom—
"The Rover's Bride" shall married be
To the yawning, gaping waste p.b.

IV.

He threw it down with a mighty throw,
Then turned to read "A World of Woe."
He read the tale
Right through and through—
His face grew pale,
His lips grew blue.
He paused, and placed most carefully
"A World of Woe" in the waste p.b.

V.

And then he paused for the want of breath,
He felt that his task would be his death.
He moved his chair,
He felt quite faint;
He wanted air,
An old complaint.
And then he said, "I've a friend in thee,
You will see me through, my waste p.b."

VI.

He turned once more to his thankless task,
To sample a poem (?) "I gently ask,"
He read and read,
'Twas quite insane:
He shook his head,
And said with pain,
"Don't ask, I pray, such riddles of me,
They'd better go to the waste p.b."

VII.

So on, and on, through that dreary day
Did that editor plod his weary way.
No grain of wheat
Amid the chaff,
No rich conceit
To raise a laugh.
But the pile is less, you can plainly see,
Though full to the brim is the waste p. b.

PROGRESS OF SCIENCE.

There are now paper flower-pots.

Hot milk is a tonic and sedative as well.

Wood fibre underwear is new and serviceable.

A locomotive has been invented that consumes its own smoke.

According to scientists the grasshopper has ears on his fore-legs.

A new English saddle has a series of springs to relieve the rider from jolting.

Whispers can be transmitted 500 miles by the new telephone which, it is said, the Bell Company has just perfected.

Of the 3,000 miles of track now operated by electric cars in the United States, all but twenty miles employ the overhead system.

There seems to be a demand for shoe ventilation. Various plans with this end in view have been formulated, but none seem to be practical.

Electrician Nikola Tesla says that the time is not far distant when a vessel at sea will be able to telegraph to shore without any direct connection.

The effort to get rid of smoke is continuous and more or less successful. A smokeless fuel called "massute" is being used on steam rollers in Vienna. The fuel is composed of the liquid residuum of petroleum refineries.

A flour mill in St. Paul, U.S.A., is to be run entirely by electricity, a local genius having invented a process for manufacturing the article which will require electrical machinery.

A French chemist has discovered that aluminium will give a light of nearly as high actinic power as magnesium. Aluminium is much cheaper and emits no fumes.

A. B. Holson, of Chicago, has invented an apparatus by which runaway horses can be stopped by pressing a button connected with a battery, which will give them an electric shock.

It is said that a Swiss savant has made a discovery by which he reduces milk to a dry powder in such a manner that by the addition of water it at once assumes all its natural properties.

According to the National Zeitung a company has been organized in Hamburg to forward parcels by pneumatic tube from Hamburg to Buchen, about fifteen miles. The distance, it is expected, will be covered in eleven minutes.

Electricity is now being used in mining, for ventilating, pumping, lighting, signaling, subservice hauling, hoisting, surface transportation, under-cutting, drilling, channeling, blasting, crushing, separating and clearing.

A recent English invention is a buoyant life-saving seat for ships. It is intended for a deck seat, the upper and lower parts being made of buoyant material so that if thrown into the water, the apparatus will support several people comfortably.

It now requires but thirteen pounds of water converted into steam with a pressure of 175 to 200 pounds in the boiler to secure one horse-power with a triple expansion engine. By the use of one-third more coal the pressure in the boiler and the horse-power can be doubled.

A Glasgow chemist has discovered a new method of producing cyanide at one-third of the present cost of manufacture. The cheapening of this important product will have an important bearing on gold production, as it will enable many low-grade ores to be worked with profit.

Professor Austin gives the Royal Society of Great Britain an account of his discovery of a new alloy, of gold and aluminium which is said to be the most brilliantly colored combination yet made. It has a fine purple color with ruby tints where the light is reflected from one surface of the alloy to the other.

Among recent inventions is an elastic heel made by interposing a piece of pure rubber between the layers of the leather, the whole being fastened together by a new method of nailing. It is said to relieve the strain on the muscles and tendons of the leg and to make walking easy.

The history and growth of inventions are subjects in which all are interested. The stylograph pen brought in £40,000 a year; the India-rubber tips to pencils, £20,000; metal plates for protecting the soles and heels of boots brought in £250,000 in all; the roller skate, £200,000. A clergyman realized £400 a week by the invention of a toy; another toy, the return ball, brought in an income of £10,000; the "Dancing Jim Crow," £15,000 a year. The inventor of a copper cap for children's boots was able to leave his heirs £100,000; while Singer, of sewing-machine fame, left at his death nearly £3,000,000.

It is reported in Westphalia that the experiments of several experts have resulted in the invention of a process of manufacturing pig-iron which will revolutionize the iron industry. The simultaneous application of the electric current and the use of an easily-made acid for extracting the iron from the ore are said to be the chief characteristics of the new method. The experiments were confined to the raw material forming the blast-furnace charge, and are said to have proved completely successful, the separation of all metallic substances being rapidly and perfectly effected and the iron left in an absolutely pure condition. The process is stated to be 80 per cent. cheaper than the present blast-furnace method. The invention has been patented in all countries, and it is proposed to form a company with a capital of 50,000,000 marks (£2,500,000).

Not content with planning an underground railway, one of Berlin's civil engineers plans underground streets. They are to be covered with a close grating of steel, well supported, which admits air, light and rain, and over which the usual street traffic is carried on.

Between two small lakes near Boras, Sweden, a strip of land has interrupted traffic, but engineers have overcome the difficulty by constructing a ship railway across it and building a small steamboat that can run itself across from one lake to the other. The vessel has accomodations for sixty persons.

A notable decrease in the number of deaths from hydrophobia is observed by the Registrar-General of London. The deaths from this disease had been thirty in 1889, and had averged twenty-four annually in the three years, 1887-'88-'89; but there were only eight in 1890 and fewer than in any year since 1868.

A steamer is being built at Glasgow designed to beat the transatlantic record. With a length of 630 feet and a beam of only 70 feet, very fine lines are obtained, and about 200 feet of the ship are devoted to boilers and bunkers. The engines are a pair of triples, with four cylinders each, driving twin screws, and rated at 31,000 horse-power.

The Crown Princess of Sweden, who has been in Cairo since the beginning of the present winter, has hopes of restoration to health.
